The Four Dimensions Of Service Management

The ITIL guiding principles

Guiding principle	Description
Focus on value	Everything that the organization does needs to create, directly or indirectly, a benefit to the organization. The focus of value principle encourages every organization, including the operations of customers and users. Do not just do things, do things with purpose and intention, and a focus on value. There is a link to be a goal that is the correct service process, program, project, and people that can be used to create the desired outcome. The current state should be investigated and assessed, clearly to know how the fully understood. Do not attempt to do everything at once. Start high, start small, measure, understand the state, by organizing each into smaller, manageable systems that can be assessed and compared in a single manner. Do not be concerned a single focus or each effort.
Start where you are	Do not start with a blank page. Start with what you have, what you know, what you are doing, and what you are not doing. Start with what you have, what you know, what you are doing, and what you are not doing. Start with what you have, what you know, what you are doing, and what you are not doing.
Progress iteratively with feedback	Do not wait until the end of the project to see if you are on track. Do not wait until the end of the project to see if you are on track. Do not wait until the end of the project to see if you are on track.
Collaborate and promote visibility	Do not work in silos. Do not work in silos. Do not work in silos.

Achieving value: costs

Costs

Achieving desired outcomes requires resources (and therefore costs) and other associated with costs. Service providers help their customers to achieve outcomes and to design or take on some of the associated risks and costs. On the other hand, service relationships can introduce risks and costs, and in some cases, can negatively affect some of the intended outcomes after supporting others.
