Properties of Matter

Introduction

Are you able to distinguish, based on its properties, the object

- Which one is solid, liquid, and gaseous (physical properties)?
- Which one is homogeneous and which one is heterogeneous (chemical properties)?

What Are Physical Properties?

Start with the bottle on the right below as shown in a well-lit room. Observe it from various perspectives.

If physical properties of a substance are those which are observed without changing the identity of the substance, observed the properties of an object carefully as shown. For example, you can identify an object using colour, shape, state, or weight. In general, the properties of an object are determined by the properties of the particles the object consists of.

Many of the physical properties of materials that make up objects can be measured. These properties include density, hardness, magnetism, and the ability to conduct heat and electricity.

Some physical properties depend on how much of a material you have. In other words, a large amount of a material may have different properties from a smaller amount of the material. Other physical properties do not depend on how much of the material you have. They show that no matter how large or small a sample of material is, the particular property is always the same.

Learning Objectives

Identify the colour, state, shape, mass and volume of a substance. Distinguish between homogeneous and heterogeneous mixtures.

Learning Outcome

Identify the colour, state, shape, mass and volume of a substance.
