New York School Journal, 1898 Land of Promise Richard Waterhouse, 2025-11-01 When Richard Waterhouse turned his attention to his own family and antecedents he discovered an Australian story This book records over 200 years of history through revolution and war boom and bust relocation and work and births deaths and marriages over seven generations The narrative extends from Lyon France to London and the English provinces to Marvellous Melbourne to Sydney and the Northern Rivers of New South Wales to the Second AIF battles in north Africa and the skies of the Pacific War and to universities at home and abroad Some antecedents arrived in chains a fact lost to family lore The Drake family s blood connection to Sir Francis Drake was not lost but is exploded as a family myth In contradiction of Victorian notions of respectability Waterhouse s great great grandfather lived with a woman who was not his wife and claimed two of her children by her real husband as his own a then shameful secret which they both took to their colonial graves until 1999 in fact He had always known his squadron leader father was attached to a RAAF Catalina flying boat unit but was astonished to learn of his central role in planning the Black Cat mine laying missions in Japanese held harbours and sea lanes missions carried out metres from the sea often while under fire His small compass family studies offer major insights into the wider processes of cultural and social change in Australia over the last four centuries
