The Global Making of Policing Jana Hönke, Markus-Michael Müller, 2016-08-12 This edited volume analyses the global making of security institutions and practices in our postcolonial world The volume will offer readers the opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of the global making of how security is thought of and practiced from US urban policing diaspora politics and transnational security professionals to policing encounters in Afghanistan Palestine Colombia or Haiti It critically examines and decentres conventional perspectives on security governance and policing In doing so the book offers a fresh analytical approach moving beyond dominant one sided perspectives on the transnational character of security governance which suggest a diffusion of models and practices from a Western centre to the rest of the globe. Such perspectives omit much of the experimenting and learning going on in the post colony as well as the active agency and participation of seemingly subaltern actors in producing and co constituting what is conventionally thought of as Western policing practice knowledge and institutions. This is the first book that studies the truly global making of security institutions and practices from a postcolonial perspective by bringing together highly innovative in depth empirical cases studies from across the globe. It will be of particular interest to students and scholars interested in International Relations and Global Studies, critical Security Studies, Criminology and Postcolonial Studies.

Innovative Possibilities: Global Policing Research and Practice Les Johnston, Clifford Shearing, 2013-12-16

Innovative Possibilities: Global Policing Research and Practice brings together observations that reflect upon the state of police and policing across the globe and associated forms of policing scholarship with inputs from Africa, Australia, South and Central America, China, Europe and the USA. Following the introduction, the book begins with a review of the nature of the relationship between policing research and practice with the Victoria Police in Australia and moves on to Britain where the focus is on how the National Improvement Strategy for Policing (NISIP) is developing and how research is being used to design, define, monitor and develop its strategic interventions using a series of case studies. In the United States, the complex American terrain of the police is examined in particular; this chapter examines how crime statistics are used to rationalize, justify and account for their actions. In Latin America, a comprehensive review of research on police reform in Latin America during the last two decades is given. Africa provides a complex and diverse social terrain which needs to be understood in relation to its plural policing landscape. Police scholarship in China looks at the historical development and current status of police scholarship in China together with the emerging issues arising from it. The overarching concern of all these reflections is with bridging the deep seated tensions that exist between scholarship and practice within policing across the globe and the call for a new relationship of mutual respect that is committed to exploring better ways of governing security. This book was published as a special issue of Police Practice and Research.

Policing the World without a World Police. Assessing the Conditions of International Police Cooperation Ron Böhler, 2017-09-29 Seminar paper from the year 2010 in the subject Politics, Topic International Organisations, grade 2.0, language English, abstract.

In a speech in 2006, the Secretary General of the International Criminal Police Organization (ICPO) referred to Interpol as the world's largest international police organization, the world's only global police organization and the world's most effective international police body. With 188 member countries, the ICPO is the second largest international organization after the United Nations, based on intergovernmental cooperation between domestic law enforcement services, the so-called National Central Bureaus (NCB). In times when transnational organized crime and terrorism increase exceedingly through globalization and the internationalization of transportation and communication systems as well as international trade, the global role of Interpol and the need to react rapidly and effectively emerge as well. Whenever two or more countries are involved in a criminal act, it is a matter of the International Criminal Police Organization National police agencies adopt a double role As a states executive branch they are not fully independent from political interventions The national justice system and the securing of civil society are subjects to the state in order to control social violence and destruction and to protect the citizens from victimization in the domestic arena In short It is a matter of state sovereignty Related to the international level and the membership in Interpol the police can instead not be equated with national governments The NCBs are the key elements in the day to day performance of the tasks identified with Interpol and are consequently political actors in international relations

Crafting Transnational Policing Andrew Goldsmith, James Sheptycki, 2007-11-16 This book examines transnational policing a term meaning the policing reform by various parties involved in the policing of recipient countries

Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, 1998 The New International Policing Beth K. Greener, 2009-03-12 Police personnel have increasingly been deployed outside their own domestic jurisdictions to uphold law and order and to help rebuild states This book explores the phenomenon of a new international policing and outlines the range of challenges and opportunities it presents to both practitioners and theorists

Some Problems of International Policing Council on Foreign Relations, 1944 Global Policing Benjamin Bowling, 2012 Global Policing shows how security threats have been constructed by powerful actors to justify the creation of a new global policing architecture and how the subculture of policing shapes the world system

Written by Ben Bowling and James Sheptycki two leading international experts who bring cutting edge theoretical debates to life with case studies and examples the book demonstrates how a theory of global policing is central to understanding global governance Knowledge Management in Policing and Law Enforcement Geoffrey Dean, Petter Gottschalk, 2007 This unique book sets out the conceptual framework for knowledge management and explains how a greater understanding of the subject can help policing at an operational level It covers the foundations of knowledge management and the key security issues in relation to a globalised world of crime and terrorism it looks at the building of structures and the use of applications and it provides illustrative examples of working applications of police specific knowledge management systems

Policing the World Malcolm Anderson, 1989 The need for co operation between the police forces of the world has never been greater there is a huge growth in international drug trafficking and terrorism and many social and economic activities are becoming increasingly internationalized Interpol is the oldest and best known institution for tackling these problems but is it right for today's conditions or should it be supplanted by new arrangements In this the first scholarly study of Interpol and of other contemporary forms of police co operation across national boundaries Malcolm Anderson discusses the proliferation of different forms of co operation He recognizes that contact between police forces of sovereign independent states has always been a sensitive matter and analyses uncertainty about how far police co operation can go He also examines the shadowy role of the security services and the influence of different forms of training on police attitudes His book will be the indispensable starting point for any future serious attempt to address these crucial issues of international policing

Police Without Borders Cliff Roberson, Dilip K. Das, Jennie K. Singer, 2010-07-07 The Fifteenth Annual International Police Executive Symposium brought together 65 police executives government officials academics and researchers to discuss issues relating to all aspects of policing in a global community It focused on policing without borders the need for national and international cooperation among policing agencies and th
