Welding

Principles and Applications

Larry Jeffus

Welding is a process of joining materials, usually metals or thermoplastics, by using heat as a source of energy. The heat can be produced by a gas flame, an electric arc, laser, friction, or resistance to electrical current. The heat causes the workpieces to melt and form a weld pool. The weld pool is a molten area of the workpieces that is held together by the heat. As the heat source moves along the joint, the weld pool solidifies behind it, forming a weld bead. The weld bead is a fusion of the two workpieces, and it is the strongest part of the joint.
