Anne D. Hedeman, 2022-04-15 Visual Translation breaks new ground in the study of French manuscripts contributing to the fields of French humanism textual translation and the reception of the classical tradition in the first half of the fifteenth century While the prominence and quality of illustrations in French manuscripts have attracted attention their images have rarely been studied systematically as components of humanist translation Anne D Hedeman fills this gap by studying the humanist book production closely supervised by Laurent de Premierfait and Jean Lebegue for courtly Parisian audiences in the first half of the fifteenth century Hedeman explores how visual translation works in a series of unusually densely illuminated manuscripts associated with Laurent and Lebegue circa 1404-54 These manuscripts cover both Latin texts such as Statius's Thebaid and Achilleid Terence's Comedies and Sallust's Conspiracy of Cataline and Jurguthine War and French translations of Cicero's De senectute Boccaccio's De casibus virorum illustrium and Decameron and Bruni's De bello Punico primo Illuminations constitute a significant part of these manuscripts textual apparatus which helped shape access to and interpretation of the texts for a French audience Hedeman considers them as a group and reveals Laurent's and Lebegue's growing understanding of visual rhetoric and its ability to visually translate texts originating in a culture removed in time or geography for medieval readers who sought to understand them The book discusses what happens when the visual cycles so carefully devised in collaboration with libraries and artists by Laurent and Lebegue escaped their control
