Remember that an artist's drawing does not always have to be a finished work, and that the finished work can be a drawing.

PROBLEM 1.2

Domestic Interior, Women

Make a drawing in which you combine aspects of figures in space with the domestic interior of your studies. In this exercise, you can take any of the previous studies.

Use charcoal on paper to draw a scene of a domestic interior. You can use the same composition as the other drawings (Figure 1.11) or you can invent a new one. You can use any of the figures and their actions as ideas. Think about the composition and the use of space. You can use any of the previous studies as a starting point. The composition of the drawing is the most important element. Remember to include the figures and the interior of the scene in the work.

Domestic Interior

Make a charcoal drawing of a domestic interior. In this exercise, you can use any of the previous studies. You can use the same composition as the other drawings (Figure 1.11) or you can invent a new one. You can use any of the figures and their actions as ideas. Think about the composition and the use of space. You can use any of the previous studies as a starting point. The composition of the drawing is the most important element.
