Prior Knowledge Questions (Do these BEFORE using the Gizmo.)

1. What does your teacher tell you about the relationship between the number of atoms of a radioactive substance and the number of half-lives?

1. The number of atoms is halved every half-life.

2. If you know the number of atoms of a radioactive substance at the start of a half-life, how many atoms will you have at the end of that half-life?

2. The number of atoms will be half of the number of atoms at the start of the half-life.

Warm-Up

Like an unopened soda, a radioactive substance has a half-life, which is the amount of time it takes for half of the substance to decay. For example, if you have 100 grams of a substance with a half-life of 10 years, after 10 years you will have 50 grams left. After 20 years, you will have 25 grams left, and so on.

The half-life of a substance is a constant, and it is the same for all atoms of that substance. The half-life of a substance is a constant and does not change.
