Building the 21st Century Home David Rudlin, Nicholas Falk, 1999 The book reviews the way that planning policies architectural trends and economic forces have undermined the viability of urban areas in Britain since the Industrial Revolution Now that much post war planning philosophy is being discredited we are left with few urban models other than garden city inspired suburbia Are these appropriate in the 21st century given environmental concerns demographic change social and economic pressures The authors suggest that these trends point to a very different urban future If the 19th century home was the terrace and the 20th century was the suburban semi what will be the 21st century home In the 21st century it is likely that a change will take place in the way that we build our towns and cities as dramatic as that brought about by the garden city pioneers a hundred years ago Change should not however be brought about by regulation or by forcing people against their will to return to towns and cities. Instead, this book argues that we must reform our towns and cities so that they become attractive, humane places where people will choose to live. The Sustainable Urban Neighbourhood is a model for such reform, and the book describes what this would look like and how it might be brought about.
