Detection And Prevention Of Sql Injection Attacks:

Basics of SQL Injection Analysis, Detection and Prevention Jagdish Halde,2014-10 Web sites are dynamic static and most of the time a combination of both Web sites needs to protect their databases to assure security An SQL injection attacks interactive web applications that provide database services These applications take user inputs and use them to create an SQL query at run time In an SQL injection attack an attacker might insert a malicious crafted SQL query as input to perform an unauthorized database operation Using SQL injection attacks an attacker can retrieve modify or can delete confidential sensitive information from the database It may jeopardize the confidentiality trust and security of Web sites which totally depends on databases This report presents a code reengineering that implicitly protects the web applications from SQL injection attacks It uses an original approach that combines static as well as dynamic analysis In this report I mentioned an automated technique for moving out SQL injection vulnerabilities from Java code by converting plain text inputs received from users into prepared statements

Prevention and Detection of SQL Injection Attacks at the Database Layer

Payal Singh,2014 A lot of research has gone into eliminating SQL Injection attacks over the past decade and yet it is one of the most prevalent web based attacked harming commerce as well as privacy today This is a clear indicator that we need to look deeper than just the network and application layer to consolidate security recommendations and practices into the core of any application its data layer

Runtime Monitoring Technique to Detect and Prevent SQL Injection Attacks Ramya Dharam,2014 The increasing use of web applications to provide reliable online services such as banking shopping etc and to store sensitive user data has made them vulnerable to attacks that target them In particular SQL injection whihc allows attackers to gain unauthorized access to the database by injecting specially crafted input strings is one of the most serious threats to web applications. Although researchers and practitioners have proposed various methods to address the SQL injection problem, organizations continue to be its victim as attackers are successfully able to circumvent the employed techniques. In this research, we develop a Runtime Monitoring Framework to detect and prevent SQL Injection Attacks on web applications. At its core, the framework leverages the knowledge gained from pre-deployment testing of web applications to identify legal valid execution paths. Monitors are then developed and instrumented to observe the application's behavior and check it for compliance with the valid legal execution paths. Any deviation in the application's behavior is identified as a possible SQL Injection Attack. We conducted an extensive evaluation of the framework by targeting subject applications with a large number of both legitimate and malicious inputs and assessed its ability to detect and prevent SQL Injection Attacks. The framework successfully allowed all the legitimate inputs to access the database without generating any false positives and was able to effectively detect attacks without generating false negatives. Moreover, the framework imposed a low runtime overhead on the subject applications compared to other techniques.
