Abstract

This paper examines the four cornerstones of African centered leadership-followership (ACL-F), an ethnic group specific approach to leadership devised for African people in 2000 at the Kwame Ture Leadership Institute by Dr. Uhuru Hotep. ACL-F in the American context seeks to restore Black sovereignty in political, economic and cultural terms by incorporating African American and classical African socio-political ideals, values, practices and institutions. Finding inspiration and example in the village building traditions of the Maroons and the Exodusters, ACL-F seeks the restoration of sovereignty and Maat thru the installation of Sankofa and the Johari Sita in African American affairs.

As a synthesizing project, ACL-F draws from both the W.E.B. DuBois (DuBoisian) and the Booker T. Washington (Washingtonian) schools of leadership. So it rests comfortably between DuBois' Pan Africanism and Washington's economic nationalism viewing both as complimentary to and compatible with our push to restore African American sovereignty. Moreover, ACL-F is to the field of leadership what African centered education is to the field of education and African centered psychology is to the field of psychology: all three disciplines are grounded in indigenous African cultural sensibilities and perspectives.

Like Maulana Karenga's Kwanzaa Theory (1997) and Molefi Asante's Afrocentricity (2007), ACL-F is a uniquely African American contribution to what is now a multi-national re-Africanization project initiated in the 1960s by Sekou Ture of Guinea and Amilcar Cabral of Guinea-Bissau to rid their nations of destructive European belief systems and value structures by restoring the communal and democratic practices of their forebears who ruled their nations successfully before European invasion and conquest.
