Consumer Neuroscience -

Foundation, Validation, and Relevance Thomas Zoëga Ramsøy, Hilke Plassmann, Carolyn Yoon, Joseph T. Devlin, 2023-08-07 Consumer neuroscience has become an expanding area of both research and conduct spanning from academic interests in the brain bases of consumption choices to commercial application of neuroscience tools and metrics. However, many of these advances are still criticized for low applicability, scattered publication records, conceptual vagueness, and a lack of proper scientific and commercial validation. To make matters worse, there is now a host of proposed commercial applications of both the insights from neuroscience and the application of neuroscience and neurophysiology tools to test consumer responses. While many of these approaches may be valid, many other approaches are either not properly validated or may be flawed, misguided, or even outright lies. As a discipline, there is a need for both the basic and applied research in consumer neuroscience to become aligned. The purpose of this Research Topic is to provide this much-needed platform for such an industrial alignment. In doing so, this Research Topic will provide perspectives on three main areas: 1) distinctions between basic translational and applied consumer neuroscience research; 2) conceptual clarification on key concepts relevant to the science and application of consumer neuroscience; 3) validation of consumer neuroscience methods and how they relate to commercially relevant cases. For this Research Topic, we therefore welcome submissions that combine academic and commercial research all in the vein of making advances in establishing a valid, applicable consumer neuroscience.

Multi-Channel Retailing Lynda Gamans Poloian, 2009-06-08 This text identifies and explains the underlying principles of e-retailing and its relationship with conventional retail methods. Ethics and Neuromarketing Andrew R. Thomas, Nicolae Alexandru Pop, Ana Maria Iorga, Cristian Ducu, 2016-10-19 This book addresses the emerging field of neuromarketing, which at its core aims to better understand the impact of marketing stimuli by observing and interpreting human emotions. It includes contributions from leading researchers and practitioners venturing beyond the tactics and strategies of neuromarketing to consider the ethical implications of applying powerful tools for data collection. The rationale behind neuromarketing is that human decision making is not primarily a conscious process. Instead, there is increasing evidence that the willingness to buy products and services is an emotional process where the brain uses shortcuts to accelerate the decision-making process. At the intersection of economics, neuroscience, consumer behavior, and cognitive psychology, neuromarketing focuses on which emotions are relevant in human decision making and uses this knowledge to make marketing more effective. The knowledge is applied in product design, enhancing promotions and advertising, pricing, professional services, and store design, and improving the consumer experience as a whole. The foundation for all of this activity is data gathering and analysis. Like many new processes and innovations, much of neuromarketing is operating far ahead of current governmental compliance and regulation, and thus current practices are raising ethical issues. For example, facial recognition software used to monitor and detect a wide range of micro-expressions has been tested at several airports under the guise of security and counterterrorism. To what extent is it acceptable to screen the entire population using these powerful and intrusive techniques without getting passengers consent Citing numerous examples from the public and private sectors the editors and contributing authors argue that while the United States has catalyzed technological advancements European companies and governments are more progressive when it comes to defining ethical parameters and developing policies This book details many of those efforts and offers rational constructive approaches to laying an ethical foundation for neuromarketing efforts
