Bennett Birth Of Museum :

The Birth of the Museum Tony Bennett, 2013-10-18 In a series of richly detailed case studies from Britain Australia and North America Tony Bennett investigates how nineteenth and twentieth century museums fairs and exhibitions have organized their collections and their visitors Discussing the historical development of museums alongside that of the fair and the international exhibition Bennett sheds new light upon the relationship between modern forms of official and popular culture Using Foucaultian perspectives The Birth of the Museum explores how the public museum should be understood not just as a place of instruction but as a reformatory of manners in which a wide range of regulated social routines and performances take place This invigorating study enriches and challenges the understanding of the museum and places it at the centre of modern relations between culture and government For students of museum cultural and sociology studies this will be an asset to their reading list The birth of the museum Bennett, 1995 Curating Community Stacy

How Museums Tell Stories Amelia Wong, 2025-03-27 How Museums Tell Stories explains how museums work as a form of media that narrates stories intentionally and unintentionally Story in life and in museums is a phenomenon that emerges as people perceive represent and interpret the qualities of tellability and narrativity in relation to stimuli Tellability is noteworthy it attracts our attention Narrativity is a set of elements that enables us to perceive a story is being or could be told The book discusses how and why these qualities are so present in museums and how they enable physical institutions to tell stories in many forms at many scales in many styles of representation and to varying degrees Drawing on conceptions of narrative from literary theory film psychology and cognitive science Wong offers a shared vocabulary for understanding and analyzing how story manifests in museums at the level of objects collections exhibitions and space How Museums Tell Stories will be essential reading for researchers and students interested in how and why museums engage audiences as well as museum and cultural heritage practitioners seeking concepts and analytical tools for approaching and evaluating their work more critically and conscientiously

Indigenizing the Museum Majel Boxer,2008 This dissertation begins by situating decolonization as a theoretical tool in examining the tribal museum model It argues that individuals institutions and communities engaged in tribal museum projects can uphold and perpetuate past museum methods of exhibition which were and are colonialist in nature Thus utilizing the theory of decolonization is important in the examination of two tribal museums the Osage Tribal Museum in Pawhuska Oklahoma and the Museum at Warm Springs in Warm Springs Oregon The development of a decolonized tribal museum model is complicated by the notion that to be truly decolonized a colonized community can not be engaged with the very same institutions which have had a hand in their colonization This dissertation is laid out in the following order Chapter One examines the colonialist relationship between indigenous nations museums and the federal government in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries Chapter Two develops the theory of decolonization as it is understood within the U S context and underscores the various ways that two indigenous nations have negotiated these relationships and maintained their respective museums as sites of decolonization Chapter Three examines the early history of the Osage Tribal Museum which emerged in 1938 as the first tribal museum to be built by an indigenous nation Chapter Four explores the Museum at Warm Springs and departs from the previous chapter by describing and analyzing the permanent exhibits and reading them through the lens of decolonization finally Chapter Five draws upon the work of scholars employing the theory of decolonization to their reading of the NMAI The purpose of this chapter is to illustrate the complex nature of decolonization That is that collaboration between the museum profession and indigenous communities is not decolonizing work rather it is the overarching goals of community empowerment truth telling and privileging indigenous knowledge that are markers of decolonization The dissertation concludes by asserting that decolonization as a theory and practice can be empowering to indigenous communities

Museum Movies Haidee Wasson,2005 In 1935 the foundation of the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art in New York marked the transformation of the film medium from a passing amusement to an enduring art form Haidee Wasson maps the work of the MoMA film library as it pioneered the preservation of film

The Place of the Audience Mark Jancovich, Lucy Faire, Sarah Stubbings, 2003-04-28 It has been a recurring complaint both within and against film studies that it has largely ignored the activities of audiences This book aims to address this absence as compared to television studies and to explain its cause The authors argue that there is a social context in which the consumption of film can be understood or studied historically demonstrating that a concentration on the place of film consumption within the changing cultural politics of the city can offer a compelling and productive focus of analysis This book examines not only the different meanings of different sites of film exhibition and distribution city centre cinemas local cinemas art house cinemas multiplexes terrestrial television transmission video rental and retail and satellite cable but also the meanings of the activities of film consumption associated with these sites Through use of archival materials and ethnographic studies of the audience the book examines the meanings of film consumption from the earliest film showings up to the 21st century
