The ITIL guiding principles

Guiding principle	Description
Focus on value	Everything that the organization does needs to create, directly or indirectly, a benefit to the organization. The focus of value principle encompasses every perspective, including the experience of customers and users. Do not just think about your products and services without considering what a process outside it is leveraging. There is a risk to be a great deal in the current service process, program, project, and people that can be used to create the desired outcome.
Start where you are	The current state should be investigated and assessed, taking into account the fully understood Do not attempt to do everything at once. Start high standards, realistic, achievable goals. By organizing work into smaller, manageable sections that can be completed and completed in a timely manner, you stand to receive a stronger focus on each effort.
Progress iteratively with feedback	Work in small, frequent, and often visible increments of work that allow you to focus and experiment, make improvements, change, and bring together work from different projects, results, and time periods to create more effective, efficient, and increased benefits of long-term value.
Collaborate and promote visibility	Enhancing transparency, openness, information, understanding, and trust, which are fundamental to service success.

Achieving value: costs

Real risks

Achieving desired outcomes requires resources (and therefore costs) which are associated with risk. Service providers help their customers to address outcomes and to design or take on parts of the associated risks and costs. On the other hand, service relationships can introduce new risks and costs, and in some cases, can negatively affect some of the intended outcomes after supporting others.
