

Computing Discounts Activity

Context

When purchasing items, it is often not possible to take advantage of more than one retailer's offer on the same item. In this activity, you will compare the discounts offered by two different retailers. You will use retail prices, the difference between the reference price and the retail price to calculate the savings. Alternatively, you can calculate an effective percentage discount on the sale, which represents the percentage by which the price is lowered by the retailer. The savings percentage is the percent by which the price is lowered by the retailer.

Savings = Retail Price - Sale Price = Difference between reference price and sale price

Effective Percentage Discount = $\frac{\text{Savings}}{\text{Retail Price}} \times 100\%$

Item	Reference Price	Retail	Effective %
Apple	$100.00	$75.00	25%
Apple	$100.00	$80.00	20%
Apple	$100.00	$85.00	15%
Microsoft	$200.00	$150.00	25%
Microsoft	$200.00	$170.00	15%
Microsoft	$200.00	$180.00	10%

As the discounts increase, it will be interesting to see if they reach a point where you would actually spend less than the reference price. How does your effective discount compare with the discount given? Will they ever be equal? Try to find out.

1. If the effective discount is greater than the reference price, it means you are saving less than the reference price. This means that the effective discount is less than the reference price.
2. If the effective discount is less than the reference price, it means you are saving more than the reference price. This means that the effective discount is greater than the reference price.
3. If the effective discount is equal to the reference price, it means you are saving the same amount as the reference price. This means that the effective discount is equal to the reference price.
4. If the effective discount is greater than the reference price, it means you are saving more than the reference price. This means that the effective discount is greater than the reference price.
5. If the effective discount is less than the reference price, it means you are saving less than the reference price. This means that the effective discount is less than the reference price.
