Human Resource Strategies, Stages of Development and Organization Size Survey Ohio State University. Fisher College of Business,2002 In an effort to determine whether there are differences in human resource strategies based on either the size of the organization or its life cycle stage of development this survey divides organizations into four stages of development Start Up Expansion Consolidation and Diversification and size groups ranging from those with fewer than 100 employees to those with more than 2 500 employees Among its many conclusions the survey found that regarding stage of development human capital was most important to companies in all stages of development that the voice of the employee appears to be more valued at companies in the Start Up stage than in more mature organizations and that hiring the right people is more important to Start Ups and those in the expansion stage while training and developing current employees is ranked more highly at mature companies Regarding size the survey found that small organizations are more likely to provide compensation solely in the form of base pay while large organizations are more likely to give bonuses based on the profits of the organization

Religion in the Workplace Mini-survey ,1997 Performance Management Survey ,2000

Layoffs and Job Security Survey Society for Human Resource Management (U.S.),2001 This survey examines reasons organizations resort to layoffs how layoffs are conducted and the subsequent effects on remaining staff Survey data collection ended just prior to September 11 and therefore does not reflect conditions following the attacks However it does provide valuable information on employee response to layoffs and insight on how human resource professionals may help to assuage the stress of future staff reductions Among its many conclusions the survey finds that 20 percent of organizations announced layoffs through group meetings while five percent issued written notice and that following the reductions organizations reported improved profits and productivity but also increased gossip decreased morale and loyalty and a rise in resignations
