Course Description

International relations theory continues to be predominately constructed by scholars in the Global North. This course is constructed in part to address former International Studies Association President Amitav Acharya's call for a more Global Studies approach to the study of international relations. Accordingly, this course problematizes the western-centric nature of International Relations (IR) as a discipline, and explores alternative histories of the disciplines and more current contributions from the Global South. In addition, we will also partly examine the role of developing countries, or what we call the "Global South," in contemporary world politics. That enshrines our exploration of the definition(s), category and purposefulness of the notion of the "Global South" itself, more specifically during the first part of the course. Moreover, we will depart from questions such as: How 'international' is IR?; How did diverging approaches to IR emerge in different world regions? Can existing frameworks make sense of the current geopolitical changes in the international system?

During the second part of the course, we will engage with scholarship questioning the Eurocentric and Western dominance of IR and International Political Economy, and explore key contributions by non-Western scholars. We will try to find answers to questions such as: Can we assume that an African / Asian / Latin American perspective on IR will necessarily be different from Western perspectives?

It is assumed that students have a good understanding of IR as a (Western) discipline, in particular the main perspectives (Realism, Liberalism, Structuralism and Constructivism). Theories of International Relations course – or an adequate equivalent graduate course on the topic – is a prerequisite for this course. If you need to brush up on your international theory, you may consult the reference works labelled 'fundamental readings' below.

The course will mainly take the form of text and video/audio-based discussions, input presentations, and group and independent work. High premium is placed on attendance, independent readings and text preparation prior to classwork and regular, proactive participation. We will not hunt for the one big truth, but explore our capacity to critical assess
