Redesigning Grief Gabriela Carina Di Sarli, 2021
Grief while one of the most universal human experiences can lead to long lasting mental health issues for some if the loss was sudden or violent Even in so called normal grief an individual will experience a huge disruption to their life Web 2 0 marked the evolution of users from passive consumers of content to active participants who generate content and dialogue with other users through social media In this digitally mediated age a person will generate massive amounts of data in the form of photos videos audio documents chats and other files which will become their digital legacy postmortem The objectives of this research were to 1 understand the foundation of modern grief theory 2 investigate the ways in which the internet and computing have transformed archiving rituals post loss and 3 critically analyze the designer s role in shaping the experience of grief online In this ethnographic study participants were asked questions surrounding their current mourning practices and how they handle the digital legacy of their loved ones Fieldwork with bereaved users revealed that in addition to physical crafting digital crafting has emerged as a common practice due to a large number of conversations and interactions being digitally mediated Digital crafting in the context of bereavement can be described as the act of gathering editing curating and archiving a variety of digital materials for the purpose of record keeping remembering sharing and future bequeathing A speculative design project is presented to bring attention to the role that designers play in the experience of the bereaved and challenge them to consider new ways to facilitate connections between the bereaved and deceased through digital media

British Widows of the First World War Andrea Hetherington, 2018-04-30 Widows of the Great War is the first major account of the experience of women who had to cope with the death of their husbands during the conflict and then rebuild their lives It explores each stage of their bereavement from the shock of receiving the news that their husband had been killed through grief and mourning to the practical issues of compensation and a widow s pension The way in which the state and society treated the widows during this process is a vital theme running through the book as it reveals in vivid detail how the bureaucracy of war helped and hindered them as they sought to come to terms with their loss Andrea Hetherington also describes often overlooked aspects of bereavement and she features many telling first hand accounts from the widows themselves which show how they saw their situation and how they reacted to it Her study gives us a fascinating insight into the way in which the armed services and the government regarded war widows during the early years of the twentieth century
