Laws of the State of California Regulating the Drilling of Petroleum and Gas Wells California, 1915 The law of 1915 was drawn in response to a widespread demand among oil operators for some means of regulating the drilling of wells so that the operations of one concern would not damage the property of a neighbor by the infiltration of water There was also a general realization of the fact that operations should if possible be so systematized as to win from the ground the greatest amount of oil at the least expense underground water if uncontrolled would of course defeat such a purpose
