Evaluate an investigation

- When we evaluate, we decide if something is done well or if it can be done better.
- We compare the conclusions with the hypothesis.
- Say whether the investigation proved the hypothesis right or wrong.
- We see whether there is a way to get even better results.
- How to evaluate:
 - Review the steps in the investigation.
 - Use a checklist.
 - The questions you answer 'no' on, is a point where you should improve or adapt your investigation.

Plants store food as starch

- Plants change some of the glucose (sugar) they make in their leaves into starch.
- They store the starch in different parts of the plant.
- Fruits, roots, leaves, stems and seeds.

Testing for starch

- Iodine changes from yellow brown to blue black when starch is present.
- If there is no starch present the iodine will stay yellow brown.
