

Computing Discounts Activity

Context

When purchasing items, it is often not clear how much the total price will be after discounts. For example, suppose a $100 item is discounted 10% and then 20% off the total price. The difference between the original price and the total price is called the savings. Alternatively, when two successive discounts are offered (percentages a and b), what represents the percentage by which the price is reduced by the combined savings percentage? In general, what is the formula for the combined savings percentage?

Suppose the price is $100 and the savings percentage is s .

1. If $a = 10\%$ and $b = 20\%$, then $s = 28\%$ or 0.28 savings.

2. In general, what is the formula for s in terms of a and b percent values?

3. If $a = 10\%$ and $b = 20\%$, what is the formula for a and b percent values?

Item	Price Before	Market	Discount %
Apple	$100.00	100.00	0%
Apple	$90.00	$81.00	10%
Apple	$81.00	$64.80	20%
Computer	$1000.00	$810.00	19%
Computer	$810.00	$648.00	19.8%
Computer	$648.00	$518.40	20%

As the examples above illustrate, computing savings on the total price paid accurately requires the two discounts applied "one after the other" sequentially. Similarly, when the second price after the discounts is $81 and the first price is $100, the total savings

1. is the total savings (savings) of an additional price of 28 percent and means that 28% of $100 equals the total savings.
2. is 28% of $100, the total savings. This savings is the difference between $100 and $72.
3. is the total savings and means that 28% means in the situation above that the savings percentage s equals 28% and therefore is 28% of the price.
4. The savings percentage is 19%, not 39%, but the additional price is 39%.
5. The savings on the second discount is 19% of $81, which is 15.39% of $100.
6. 19% of $81 is 15.39% of $100.
