(Refs: Geankoplis, Chapter 1 for an overview and other chapters for various separation processes; Doran: Cht 10 Unit operations. Earle: Unit Operations in Food Processing: <http://www.nzifst.org.nz/unitoperations>).

1. Introduction

In most chemical and biochemical production processes, the desired product (s) from chemical and bioreactors is (are) in a mixture with other components, such as unconverted reactants, by-products and others required for the reaction such as catalysts, and the components of solvent or reaction media. Therefore, separation is needed to attain the products in desired purity and form.

The term "unit operation" has been used in the chemical industry and chemical engineering textbooks for a long time to refer to the various separation processes for the recovery and purification of products. So named is because that these separation processes can be viewed as separate and distinct steps or units in a production process, and a given unit operation will have the same principles and basic operations in different production processes. Nowadays, separation processes are more widely used than unit operations, especially in biotechnology. Among the common separation processes are evaporation, distillation, absorption, crystallization, filtration, centrifugation, drying and membrane processes. Separation processes are primarily based on physical means and some on physico-chemical means.

This chapter is to introduce the general concepts of separation technology and some common separation processes in chemical and bioprocess technology.

2. General concepts and characteristics of separation processes

Separation of components in a mixture is always based on the difference in a physical property among the mixture components. Based on the nature or physical mechanism of separation, various separation processes can be classified into,

- 1) Mechanical separations: separations based on size and/or density differences of different components in a mixture, for separation of solid from liquid (e.g. filtration and centrifugation).
- 2) Diffusional separations (mass transfer operations): separations based on molecular movement toward a favourable phase, for separation of dissolved components (e.g. distillation, absorption, extraction). (Note: Mass transfer is the transfer of solute molecules from one point to another or from one phase to another.)
- 3) Membrane separations: use of a semipermeable membrane to separate molecules with difference in size or some other properties.

Phase equilibrium relationships are the theoretical bases for most separation processes depending on mass transfer between phases (in 2: all classified as contact-equilibrium processes). Phase equilibrium is a thermodynamic state established between two (or more) phases. For a multiple component system, at equilibrium, the concentrations of all components in each phase no longer change, and the distribution of components in the two phases is completed and will be maintained. The equilibrium state (and concentrations) may change with temperature, pressure and composition.
