Wherever we look we see language constituting the world not just reflecting it For instance the words for colours make a reality they don't just name things which are there the spectrum isn't divided into seven primary colours all the colours merge into one another According to structural linguistics by using language we are not reflecting a given reality but are rather constructing one Systemic functional grammar developed by M A K Halliday states just this construal feature of language as well That language functions to make meanings and not to only refer to the outside world But furthermore elaborates on how a text makes those meanings It focuses therefore on the functional description of language The basic assumption is that language use is always functional people do not just talk or just write 2 but rather any use of language serves a specific purpose namely to make meanings The primary concern of systemic functional linguistics can therefore be summed up under the questions How is language structured for use 3 How does it make meanings According to Halliday language makes meanings on three different levels simultaneously on the experiential level because it represents experience on the interpersonal level because language is used to interact with each other and on the textual level because we organize our message somehow This research paper will focus on the textual metafunction of language which is the theory of the clause being organized as a message The aim is to show that text itself construes the context by involving meaningful choices concerning what to put in thematic position and by means of cohesion Thus context is not only created through coherence i.e. the outside knowl
