Sensor Less Speed Control of PMSM using SVPWM Technique Based on MRAS Method for Various Speed and Load Variations

ABSTRACT:

The permanent magnet synchronous motor (PMSM) has emerged as an alternative to the induction motor because of the reduced size, high torque to current ratio, higher efficiency and power factor in many applications. Space Vector Pulse Width Modulation (SVPWM) technique is applied to the PMSM to obtain speed and current responses with the variation in load. This paper analysis the structure and equations of PMSM, SVPWM and voltage space vector process. The Model Reference Adaptive System (MRAS) is also studied. The PI controller uses from estimated speed feedback for the speed senseless control of PMSM based on SVPWM with MRAS. The control scheme is simulated in the MATLAB/Simulink software environment. The simulation result shows that the speed of rotor is estimated with high precision and response is considerable fast. The whole control system is effective, feasible and simple.
