

Kin remembrance of Trauma

Journal of Traumatic Stress, 2008, Vol. 21, No. 1, pp. 1-10

Objective: Kin remembrance of trauma (KRT) is a form of vicarious trauma that occurs when family members of trauma victims experience symptoms of posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) as a result of their relationship with the victim. The present study examined the prevalence of KRT in a sample of 100 family members of trauma victims. Method: Participants completed a questionnaire that assessed their exposure to trauma, their relationship with the victim, and their symptoms of PTSD. Results: The results showed that 25% of family members of trauma victims experienced symptoms of PTSD. The prevalence of KRT was significantly higher among family members of trauma victims who were exposed to trauma than among family members of trauma victims who were not exposed to trauma. Conclusions: The results suggest that KRT is a significant form of vicarious trauma that can occur in family members of trauma victims. Further research is needed to explore the mechanisms of KRT and to develop interventions to help family members of trauma victims cope with their symptoms.

Trauma Biomechanics Kai-Uwe Schmitt, Peter F. Niederer, Duane S. Cronin, Markus H. Muser, Felix Walz, 2014-02-10

For the 4th edition of Trauma Biomechanics all existing chapters referring to traffic and sports have been revised and updated. New scientific knowledge and changes in legal defaults such as norms and standards of crash tests have been integrated. Additionally, one chapter has been added where biomechanical aspects of injuries affected by high energies are communicated in a new way. The mechanical basics for ballistics and explosions are described and the respective impacts on human bodies are discussed. The new edition with the additional chapter therefore is addressed to a broader audience than the previous one.
