

HUMAN FETAL GROWTH LAB

Complete development of all anatomical parts occurs 38 weeks. Development continues until age 20, with many changes that are neuroanatomical. The processes do not occur in the same order, being highly affected by both genetic and environmental factors. Growth is not straightforward and the average length characteristic each stage of development. This approximate age of a fetus can be determined from its mass and length.

Other important developmental milestones include birth and breast development, starting at around 10-12 weeks. Needs to be noted that fetuses usually have a higher proportion of fat stores, just prior to birth, but these completely disappear by 10-12 weeks postnatally. As the fetus grows, the body becomes more like an adult, though there is still some fat stores and growth to summarize your data. At the end of the development, you will answer questions relating to your data.

Plans for the Lab:

1. Part A: Measuring and Plotting the Developmental Human Fetus
2. Part B: Graphing the Length of a Developing Fetus
3. Part C: Graphing the Mass of a Developing Fetus

Table 1: Mass of a Developing Fetus
