

Investigative task chapter 7- smoking

Researcher John Lee conducted a cross-sectional study of 10000 people. It shows that the number of cigarettes smoked per adult per year and the rate of chronic lung disease (including heart disease) tend to be related. The 10,000 people that were surveyed are shown in the table below. The table is a generalisation of the relationship between cigarette consumption and CVD risk rates, and is not meant to represent any specific population. How would you use the results from this study?

The association between cigarette consumption and CVD appears to be a positive linear pattern and slope. The association between cigarette consumption per individual year and CVD mortality rate is positive. In 1980, people smoking at the equivalent of the rate of 10 cigarettes per day would have a CVD mortality rate of 1.0. In 1990, people smoking at the rate of 20 cigarettes per day would have a CVD mortality rate of 2.0. The rate of CVD mortality for the period would be 1.0. The rate of CVD mortality for the period would be 2.0.

When you look at the data, you can see that there is a positive linear relationship between cigarette consumption and CVD mortality rate. The relationship is positive, and the slope is positive. The rate of CVD mortality for the period would be 1.0. The rate of CVD mortality for the period would be 2.0.
