Remember that an artist's drawing does not always show objects. The subject's form and the viewer's mind are the focus.

PROBLEM 1.1

General Narrative Drawing

Make a drawing in which you combine objects or figures in order to tell a general story of your subject. In this exercise, we have taken a simple, general narrative subject.

Take a subject and create two drawings of a figure. One drawing should be a general narrative of the figure's activity (Figure 1.11). The other drawing should be a general narrative of the figure's activity and the subject's object. The drawing should be a general narrative of the figure's activity and the subject's object. The drawing should be a general narrative of the figure's activity and the subject's object.

Concrete Form

Make a collection of drawings of concrete forms in order to explore form. We have seen an example of the drawing of form in the figure drawing (see Figure 1.12), in which the figure's form is drawn with the help of other forms to create a unified, single composition. Draw 10 to 15 simple, solid geometric forms.
