

McDonald's' transnational strategy case study for global expansion

This slide covers the case study of McDonald's transnational strategy implementation. It includes strategies such as menu customization, local supplier, global marketing campaign, and standardization.

Overview

- McDonald's is a fast-food restaurant chain that operates in over 100 countries, with more than 38,000 restaurants worldwide.
- It operates under a franchise model, which allows local franchisees to adapt the menu and marketing strategies to the local market.

Menu customization

- Adapts its menu to local tastes and preferences, offering items such as
 - Macha tea in India
 - Masala chicken in India

Local suppliers

- Sources ingredients from local suppliers, which supports the local economy.
- Helps to ensure that the products are fresh and meet local quality standards.

Global marketing campaigns

- Global marketing campaigns that are tailored to local cultures and regions.
- Company's "I'm lovin' it" campaign was launched globally but excluded local celebrities and cultural references in different regions.

Standardization

- Standardized menu and operating system across its global locations, which ensures consistency and quality control.
- Strict guidelines for its food preparation, cooking time, and serving sizes.
- Add local items.

Impact

In 2022, McDonald's reported annual revenue of $5.115 billion from franchised restaurants and $5.555 billion in company-operated restaurants from international markets.

In Europe, over 90% of the beef, chicken, pork, and fish used in McDonald's products are sourced from local suppliers, which helps McDonald's build a positive reputation in these regions and maintain customer loyalty.

Building a reputation for quality and consistency helped McDonald's in attaining a global market share of 42.8% in 2021 in the fast-food industry, making it one of the most prominent players in the market.

In 2022, McDonald's reported a gross income of $2.115 billion, many thanks to maintaining a strong consistency while also appealing to local customers with their Global marketing campaigns.
