Exploring Human Genetics

Genetics is the study of how traits are passed from parents to offspring. In this lab, you will explore the inheritance of a specific trait and use statistical analysis to determine if the observed results match the expected results.

Procedure:

- Identify a trait that is controlled by a single gene with two alleles (dominant and recessive).
- Collect data from a large number of individuals (at least 100).
- Record the number of individuals with the dominant and recessive phenotypes.
- Calculate the expected number of individuals for each phenotype based on Mendelian inheritance.
- Perform a chi-square analysis to determine if the observed results are significantly different from the expected results.

Phenotype	Observed (O)	Expected (E)
Dominant
Recessive
Total

Chi-Square Analysis:

Calculate the chi-square value using the formula:  $\chi^2 = \sum \frac{(O - E)^2}{E}$

Compare the calculated chi-square value to the critical value from the chi-square distribution table for the appropriate degrees of freedom and significance level.

Conclusion:

Based on the chi-square analysis, the observed results are  significantly different from the expected results and  not significantly different from the expected results.

Collect data and complete
chi square analysis
