Wearable Sensor Technology for Monitoring Training Load and Health in the Athletic Population Billy

Sperlich, Hans-Christer Holmberg, Kamiar Aminian, 2020-02-13 Several internal and external factors have been identified to estimate and control the psychobiological stress of training in order to optimize training responses and to avoid fatigue overtraining and other undesirable health effects of an athlete. An increasing number of lightweight sensor-based wearable technologies have entered the sports technology market. Non-invasive sensor-based wearable technologies could transmit physical, physiological, and biological data to a computing platform and may provide through human-machine interaction smart watch, smartphone, tablet, bio-feedback of various parameters for training load management and health. However, in theory, several wearable technologies may assist to control training load, but the assessment of accuracy, reliability, validity, usability, and practical relevance of new upcoming technologies for the management of training load is paramount for optimal adaptation and health. XIII Mediterranean Conference on Medical and Biological Engineering and Computing 2013 Laura M. Roa Romero, 2013-10-01 The general theme of MEDICON 2013 is Research and Development of Technology for Sustainable Healthcare. This decade is being characterized by the appearance and use of emergent technologies under development. This situation has produced a tremendous impact on Medicine and Biology from which it is expected an unparalleled evolution in these disciplines towards novel concepts and practices. The consequence will be a significant improvement in health care and well-being, i.e. the shift from a reactive medicine to a preventive medicine. This shift implies that the citizen will play an important role in the healthcare delivery process, which requires a comprehensive and personalized assistance. In this context, society will meet emerging media incorporated to all objects capable of providing a seamless, adaptive, anticipatory, unobtrusive, and pervasive assistance. The challenge will be to remove current barriers related to the lack of knowledge required to produce new opportunities for all the society while new paradigms are created for this inclusive society to be socially and economically sustainable and respectful with the environment. In this way, these proceedings focus on the convergence of biomedical engineering topics ranging from formalized theory through experimental science and technological development to practical clinical applications. Exercise and Sport: Their Influences on
