investigator that he has little time left for casting a glance over the branches of science which are developing beside him Yet this necessity also weighs upon his soul If on the one hand he ought to study special problems on the other he cannot exempt himself from considering the ends set before special research by rising to a general outlook which shall command the view of a broader scientific basis This double necessity causes a conflict of tendencies and this conflict in our system of production results in a loss of time and of work from which the intellectual world suffers Most investigators if they are not rightly directed shut themselves up in a narrow circle and fall into a blind empiricism Others lose themselves in the region of confused generalities while a few finer spirits find the way for themselves and often must win again by fresh efforts that which they should have a right to expect as the outcome of the completed work of their companions in labor But the age of heroes that of Descartes or Leibniz whose genius opened all the doors of science seems closed forever The conquests of the past weigh upon the present and upon the future And if it is permissible to hope that a happier use of our intellectual power
