for Management Accounting language English abstract The bachelor thesis combines theories literature lab and field experiments event studies from the industry and its very own empirical research to argue from both a strategic as well as a financial perspective that an inimitable organizational culture of intrinsic motivation and meaningful work may constitute a source of competitive advantage within the War for Talent The thesis strives at highlighting the importance for firms to adapt to the newly emerged competitive environment that the ongoing War for Talent has created by considering their people as their most valuable asset for the success of the organization as already hinted at throughout The Art of War by Sun Tzu in 500 BC hence the reference in the title of this thesis After a brief review of the circumstances that led to the emergence of the War for Talent and first implications for the industry it is argued from a strategic perspective why motivated talent depicts the key resource for competitive advantage and why conventional extrinsic incentive measures aimed at maximizing productivity are no longer effective Afterwards a proposition will be made of how capitalizing on intrinsic motivation human s inner drive to accomplish inherently interesting and challenging tasks fostered through a framework of meaningful work might be the decisive driver to get ahead in the quest for talent A second string of argumentation draws a connection between meaningful work and superior financial performance This proposition is then tested by an empirical analysis comparing the financial performance of publicly traded companies featured on the 2017 Fortune 100 Best Companies to Work For list against a control portfolio and the broad market confirming significant differences for cumulative stock returns

Dowling, Christine Eckert, Nidhida Lin, 2015 McKinsey Company claim to have coined the term the war for talent in 1997 The idea still resonates with managers because it reflects the fact that talented people are a critical driver of corporate success For those involved in this war the search continues for fresh ideas about how to make the recruiting process more desirable what mix of organizational and job attributes will attract talented people how to develop more talented managers and how to design of an attractive workplace environment that retains such people Recent research managerial anecdotes and numerous surveys have highlighted the importance of various aspects of corporate and social reputation to winning the war for talent In this paper aimed mainly at a managerial audience we provide an overview of findings from a series of experiments conducted where MBAs and white collar office workers must choose amongst alternative job contracts Our findings reveal that while reputation matters it is marginal with its effect confined to the bottom and top of the reputation distribution Hence for most companies reputation factors have little substantive influence on job choice relative to more functional and utilitarian aspects of the job and company
