Psychology of Intelligence Analysis, 1999-01-01 Author's Preface This volume pulls together and republishes with some editing updating and additions articles written during 1978-86 for internal use within the CIA Directorate of Intelligence Four of the articles also appeared in the Intelligence Community journal Studies in Intelligence during that time frame The information is relatively timeless and still relevant to the never ending quest for better analysis The articles are based on reviewing cognitive psychology literature concerning how people process information to make judgments on incomplete and ambiguous information I selected the experiments and findings that seem most relevant to intelligence analysis and most in need of communication to intelligence analysts I then translated the technical reports into language that intelligence analysts can understand and interpreted the relevance of these findings to the problems intelligence analysts face The result is a compromise that may not be wholly satisfactory to either research psychologists or intelligence analysts Cognitive psychologists and decision analysts may complain of oversimplification while the non psychologist reader may have to absorb some new terminology Unfortunately mental processes are so complex that discussion of them does require some specialized vocabulary Intelligence analysts who have read and thought seriously about the nature of their craft should have no difficulty with this book Those who are plowing virgin ground may require serious effort I wish to thank all those who contributed comments and suggestions on the draft of this book Jack Davis who also wrote the Introduction four former Directorate of Intelligence DI analysts whose names cannot be cited here my current colleague Prof Theodore Sarbin and my editor at the CIA's Center for the Study of Intelligence Hank Appelbaum All made many substantive and editorial suggestions that helped greatly to make this a better book Richards J Heuer Jr

Improving Intelligence Analysis Stephen Marrin,2012-08-21 This book on intelligence analysis written by intelligence expert Dr Stephen Marrin argues that scholarship can play a valuable role in improving intelligence analysis Improving intelligence analysis requires bridging the gap between scholarship and practice Compared to the more established academic disciplines of political science and international relations intelligence studies scholarship is generally quite relevant to practice Yet a substantial gap exists nonetheless Even though there are many intelligence analysts very few of them are aware of the various writings on intelligence analysis which could help them improve their own processes and products If the gap between scholarship and practice were to be bridged practitioners would be able to access and exploit the literature in order to acquire new ways to think about frame conceptualize and improve the analytic process and the resulting product This volume contributes to the broader discussion regarding mechanisms and methods for improving intelligence analysis processes and products It synthesizes these articles into a coherent whole linking them together through common themes and emphasizes the broader vision of intelligence analysis in the introduction and conclusion chapters The book will be of great interest to students of intelligence studies strategic studies US national security US foreign policy security studies and political science in general as well as professional intelligence analysts and managers
