

Cop in the Hood Chapter 6 Summary

Under Arrest: Discretion in the Ghetto

"All they want us to do is lock up junkies and not get complaints. It's always been a numbers game."

—A Baltimore City police officer

- Story about a boy who reported being physically abused and locked out of his house, but it was his grandma's house
  - She said that he would sometimes come home drunk and threaten her and demand money
  - She hit him because he called her a bitch, she didn't let him inside
  - Legally, she is guilty of assault, child neglect, and child abuse
    - Discretion trumps law in this case - not everything has to be involved in the law, even when cops are there
  - She was not a bad caregiver - she had many children who turned out great
- The story shows that we have to trust police officers because the sergeant can not always be actively monitoring everyone
  - Different officers have different ways of handling things
- Police have lots of discretion in most situations, but not when it comes to felony crime (that's when they really have to follow the law)
  - If felony suspects are not located, the case is handed over to detectives
- Every situation has a primary officer who makes calls
  - What should happen
  - Who should go home
  - Who should be locked up
  - How the paperwork will be categorized
- William Whyte first described police discretion in 1945
  - During the civil rights movement, police discretion was largely seen as illegal and immoral
  - Egon Bittner in 1967 was the first to show police discretion in a positive light (like in the situation in the beginning of the chapter)
    - Not every statute in the books should be enforced every time
- "Heads you walk, tails you get discretionary arrests"
  - Loitering is the most widely used criminal charge in Baltimore
  - Many police misuse their discretion
