

PRINCIPLES OF ECONOMICS: MICRO ECONOMICS COMPILED BY SIR KHALID AZIZ B-COM PART 1

Micro and Macro Analysis:

In recent years, the subject matter of economics is divided into two broad areas. One of them is called Microeconomics and the other is called Macroeconomics. These two terms microeconomics and macroeconomics were first coined and used by Ranger Frisco in 1933. In recent years, division of economic theory into two separate parts has gained much importance.

Distinction/Difference between Micro and Macro Economics:

The distinction/difference between Micro and Macro economics is made clear below.

(I) Microeconomics:

Definition:

Microeconomics is a Greek word which means small.

"Microeconomics is the study of specific individual units; particular firms, particular households, individual prices, wages, individual industries particular commodities. The microeconomic theory or price theory thus is the study of individual parts of the economy".

It is economic theory in a microscope. For instance, in microeconomic analysis we study the demand of an individual consumer for a good and from there we go to derive the market demand for a good (that is demand of a group of individuals for a good). Similarly, in microeconomic theory we study the behavior of individual firms, the fixation of prices output. In the words of Samuelson:

"Microeconomics we examine among other things how individual prices are set, consider what determines the price of land and capital and enquire into the strength and weaknesses of market mechanics".

In the words of Leftwitch

"Microeconomic theory or price theory deals with the economic behavior of individual decision making units such as consumers, resources owners, business firms as well as individuals who are too small to have an impact on the national economy".

Explanation:

(i) Microeconomics and allocation of resources. The microeconomic theory takes the total quantity of resources as given. It seeks to explain how they are allocated to the production of goods. The allocation of resources to the production of goods depends upon the price of various goods and the prices of factors of production. Microeconomics analyses how the relative prices of goods and factors are determined. Thus the theory of product pricing and the theory of factor pricing (rent wages, interest and profit) fall within the domain of micro economics.
