The Power of Critical Theory for Adult Learning and Teaching Stephen Brookfield, 2005 This contribution to the literature on adult education provides adult educators with an accessible overview of critical theory's central ideas Using many direct quotes from the theorists' works Brookfield shows how critical theory illuminates the everyday practices of adult educators and helps them make sense of the dilemmas, contradictions, and frustrations they experience in their work Drawing widely on central texts in critical theory Brookfield argues that a critical theory of adult learning must focus on understanding how adults learn to challenge ideology, contest hegemony, unmask power, overcome alienation, learn liberation, reclaim reason, and practice democracy These tasks form the focus of successive chapters while later chapters review the central contentions of critical theory through the contemporary lenses of race and gender The final chapter reviews adult educational practices and looks at what it means to teach critically

Latino Education in the U.S. Lourdes Diaz Soto, 2008-09-18 Educators, parents, policy makers, and communities across the country will find this a significant addition to American educational literature and a gold mine of both current information and detailed historical facts Latinos in the United States have fought hard to attain equality, especially in the field of education This book focuses on the fight for equal educational access The contributors reveal that many Latino children still face decades-old challenges In addition to such obstacles as cultural conflicts and racism, they also face teachers' curricula and assessments that are not always respectful to their backgrounds Three major questions form the framework for this landmark work: How can schools address issues of educational equity for Latino students in the United States? How can curricula be reformed to address the needs of these students? How can scholars, community activists, and parents collaborate for the benefit of Latino learners in the United States?

Adult Learning, Critical Intelligence and Social Change National Institute of Adult Continuing Education (England and Wales), 1995 What lies beyond the current preoccupation with education and its relationship to economic growth? Has the idea of community engagement in the mixed economy of welfare through a radical, critical form of participative learning disappeared, or is it re-emerging in a different form? Adult Learning, Critical Intelligence and Social Change offers a wide range of perspectives on these and other issues which have emerged since the 1980s In the last 15 years, adult education has been subjected to restructuring around the promotion of market forces, moving away from the agenda of education for transformation towards a narrower agenda of meeting vocational needs In the process, it has become demonstrably less neutral and more overtly controversial, more vital than ever in providing essential skills and knowledge and in developing alternative visions for democratic social change This book reviews the context of these developments and focuses on contemporary debates in workplace and community-based adult education and the impact of NVQs, competence based approaches and APL on women and ethnic minority communities Individual essays illustrate critical and dynamic approaches to adult learning providing examples of commitment and progressive perspectives in practice in Britain and beyond The book opens with a critical review of the context for these changes and of the theoretical debates which attempt to analyse and explain them The chapters which follow offer specific challenges to postmodernism in relation to adult learning and focus more generally on critical debates around culture and theory Developments in trade union education women s education and vocational education are considered in depth Both as an expert overview of developments since 1980 and as a source of inspiration for a more progressive agenda this collection will appeal to students and practitioners in all forms of adult education

Multicultural Education Fred Schultz,2002 Education for Building a People's Movement David Reed,1981 Provides a model for people to help themselves overcome their oppression understand society and gain control over their lives A tool for organizers and teachers Rethinking Radical Education Ali Rattansi,David A. Reeder,1992 In Rethinking Radical Education practitioners researchers and activists offer a critical assessment of contemporary and historical forms of radical education They place the radical tradition in a historical context and reflect on its real strengths and achievements as well as its limitations anti racism peace education world studies and environmental studies and ask what their achievements have been Of course there is the recognition that radicalism is not the sole property of the left much of the New Right s thinking on education is revolutionary This collection while honouring the life work of Brian Simon provides a re evaluation and reformulation of education as we enter a new political era
