Transcription begins with the binding of transcription factors to specific regions, such as the promoter, of the gene. These factors facilitate the recruitment of the RNA polymerase II, which carries the instructions for the synthesis of a pre-mRNA transcript. During transcription, the DNA double helix is unwound, and the RNA polymerase II synthesizes a complementary RNA strand. Transcription factors are proteins that bind to specific DNA sequences and regulate the transcription of genes. They are involved in the regulation of gene expression and play a key role in the development and differentiation of cells. Transcription factors can be activated or deactivated by various signals, such as hormones, growth factors, and environmental changes. This allows cells to respond to their environment and regulate their gene expression accordingly. Most eukotes have complex genomes that require a great deal of information to be processed and translated into functional proteins.
