

SYSTEM INTERACTIONS

The image displays a collection of educational resources. On the left, a worksheet titled 'System Interactions' features a list of 15 numbered questions, each with a 'True' or 'False' response line. In the center, a text box contains a passage about system interactions, followed by a 'True or False?' section with seven numbered questions. On the right, another worksheet is partially visible, showing more questions. In the bottom right corner, a young woman with blonde hair is smiling while reading an open book.

System Interactions

Reading Passage

Most of the things we see in nature are part of a system. A system is a group of things that work together. For example, a garden is a system. It has plants, soil, and water. The plants and soil and water are all part of the system. They all work together to make the garden grow. In the same way, a city is a system. It has people, buildings, and roads. The people, buildings, and roads are all part of the system. They all work together to make the city work.

Some systems are made of things that are not living. For example, a machine is a system. It has parts that work together to make the machine work. In the same way, a computer is a system. It has parts that work together to make the computer work.

Some systems are made of things that are living. For example, a forest is a system. It has trees, animals, and people. The trees, animals, and people are all part of the system. They all work together to make the forest work.

True or False?

1. A system is a group of things that work together.
2. A garden is a system.
3. A city is a system.
4. A machine is a system.
5. A computer is a system.
6. A forest is a system.
7. A system is a group of things that work together.
