and global warming and the Indonesian government's commitment to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. A major policy initiative revolves around developing renewable energy from biomass that can be sourced from oil palm, sugar, cassava, jatropha, and timber plantations. This paper analyzes these measures and assesses the conditions under which they may be most effective.

Current practices and innovations in smallholder palm oil finance in Indonesia and Malaysia

Bronkhorst, E., Cavallo, E., van Dorth tot Medler, M., Klinghammer, S., Smit, H.H., Gijsenbergh, A., van der Laan, C., 2017-10-17. The objective of this study was to evaluate past and current policies and smallholder financing schemes in the palm oil industry in Indonesia and Malaysia. The outcomes of these models for smallholders were also evaluated in terms of income security, sustainable practices, and environmental impact. Finally, financing schemes that could contribute to more sustainable smallholder oil palm development were analyzed and compared to past and existing schemes. The focus of this study is on oil palm smallholders who play a crucial role in the palm oil production industry and account for the vast majority of oil palm cultivation in Malaysia and even more so in Indonesia. A number of past and current financing schemes in Indonesia and Malaysia were evaluated through a literature analysis and field assessment. In Malaysia, the main long-term financing challenges faced by smallholders have been solved by large government-sponsored financing schemes and are thus less relevant for the report's discussion. As such, the case studies regarding current innovative financing schemes are restricted geographically to Indonesia. The report proposes potential models to increase the mobilization of long-term finance to smallholders in the palm oil sector. Furthermore, it identifies and reflects on the key enabling conditions that would help overcome the bottlenecks in smallholder long-term financing and create an enabling environment for sustainable oil palm investments. These are: 1) incentives to meet sustainability requirements including Good Agricultural Practices (RSPO) certification and deforestation-free production; 2) land tenure security; 3) improved market linkages between smallholders and mills; 4) support for FSPs to assess and manage risks; and 5) strong and effective smallholder organizations.

Global Business and Human Rights James Featherby, 2011. This publication is an essential guide for general counsel and law firms to the changing world of human rights and its importance for global business. The book highlights the growing relationship between human rights and global business and the developing international focus on the issue, particularly as a result of recent United Nations initiatives. Non-State Actors and Transnational Governance in Southeast Asia Shaun Breslin, Helen E.S. Nesadurai, 2020-04-28. While the focus on national governments as the main providers of different forms of transnational governance in Southeast Asia is entirely understandable, such a focus can significantly underestimate the roles played by non-state actors. This comprehensive collection provides five different case studies that explore in detail how these governance forms work in different policy arenas. While previous studies have noted the way that non state actors act as pressure or advisory groups lobbying or advising states and regional organisations this book explores how they are now more actively involved in a variety of cross border networked forms of coordination providing standards rules and practices that other actors voluntarily abide by The chapters in this volume reveal variations in the architecture of transnational governance why they emerge the modes of social co ordination through which they work to shape actor behaviour and achieve impact their normative implications and how these governance schemes intersect with state and national regulatory frameworks The authors point to the importance of looking beyond arrangements established through intergovernmental mechanisms in order to gain a full understanding of how international interactions are organised in Southeast Asia This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Contemporary Asia

Plantation Life Tania Murray Li, Pujo Semedi, 2021-09-27 In Plantation Life Tania Murray Li and Pujo Semedi examine the structure and governance of Indonesia s contemporary oil palm plantations in Indonesia which supply 50 percent of the world s palm oil They attend to the exploitative nature of plantation life wherein villagers well being is sacrificed in the name of economic development While plantations are often plagued by ruined ecologies injury among workers and a devastating loss of livelihoods for former landholders small scale independent farmers produce palm oil more efficiently and with far less damage to life and land Li and Semedi theorize corporate occupation to underscore how massive forms of capitalist production and control over the palm oil industry replicate colonial style relations that undermine citizenship In so doing they question the assumption that corporations are necessary for rural development contending that the dominance of plantations stems from a political system that privileges corporations
