Be able to answer the following questions:

To what extent did the rise and collapse of Classical Empires lead to religious syncretization (fusion of multiple cultural traditions)?

The rise of classical empires caused culture syncretization because there was a higher amount of trade. More people were traveling around, causing more of their culture to be shared. Many people turned to Hinduism, Christianity and Buddhism which were the three most popular religions at that time. Many people also sought to blend the best of all three religions. Because so many nomads were traveling, many epidemics were spread, which caused the fall of these Classical Empires. Also, many peasants who had just converted were rioting against the rulers of their Empires. When these Classical Empires collapsed, many nomadic religions were replaced with more popular options. In China, nomads turned to adopting standard Chinese names. They married Chinese spouses and dressed differently.

To what extent did the collapse of the Classical Empires (Gupta, Roman, Han and Teotihuacan) represent a turning point in human history?

All of these empires caused a turning point in Human History for multiple reasons. First, many of these empires had a firm grip on the opinions their people had. In the Roman Empire, the government wanted to stamp out Christianity. They didn't like the missionaries and Christian ideals. Therefore, not many people were Christians in the Roman Empire. Once the Roman Empire fell, more people were able to adopt Christian values. Also, there was a lot of chaos during the collapse of these powerful empires. In the Han Dynasty, many peasants decided to revolt. People pronounced themselves as "War Lords" and caused havoc in the region. There was no real government. The collapse also caused a bigger spread of the already rampaging epidemic.
