

Chapter 10.10 From DNA to Protein Synthesis

Problems

What percentage of total cell protein is protein?

Background

Genetic proteins are the main structural components of living cells. In addition, they also are involved in metabolism and reproduction and other "life" functions. The specific sequence of amino acids in the protein is determined by the sequence of nucleotides in the DNA. The amino acids are joined together by peptide bonds to form a polypeptide chain. The sequence of amino acids in the polypeptide chain determines the structure and function of the protein.

Explain how you will determine the sequence of amino acids in a protein.

Methodology

Experimental Design

Pre-Lab Questions

1. Describe the process of protein synthesis. How does the sequence of amino acids in the DNA determine the sequence of amino acids in the protein?
 The amino acid sequence is determined by the sequence of nucleotides in the DNA. The amino acids are joined together by peptide bonds to form a polypeptide chain. The sequence of amino acids in the polypeptide chain determines the structure and function of the protein.
2. Compare and contrast the two types of protein synthesis. How do they differ?
 What are the differences in the two types of protein synthesis?
 There are two types of protein synthesis: transcription and translation.
3. Explain the role of each of the following in protein synthesis: DNA, mRNA, tRNA, and ribosomes.
 DNA is the template for transcription. mRNA carries the genetic information from the DNA to the ribosome. tRNA carries the amino acids to the ribosome. Ribosomes are the site of protein synthesis.
