What You Should Know

Imperialism is the policy of extending a country's power and influence through acquiring territories or acquiring other kinds of control over other countries. In the late 19th century, the United States acquired territories and possessions around the world. This was done for many reasons, including the desire to acquire new markets for American goods and to acquire new sources of raw materials.

1. Expansion of U.S. Territory

In 1845, the United States acquired Texas. In 1846, the United States acquired Oregon. In 1848, the United States acquired California. In 1853, the United States acquired Utah. In 1854, the United States acquired New Mexico. In 1858, the United States acquired Arizona. In 1867, the United States acquired Alaska. In 1898, the United States acquired Hawaii. In 1898, the United States acquired Puerto Rico. In 1898, the United States acquired Guam. In 1898, the United States acquired the Philippines. In 1898, the United States acquired the Virgin Islands.

The United States acquired territories and possessions around the world for many reasons. One reason was to acquire new markets for American goods. Another reason was to acquire new sources of raw materials. A third reason was to acquire new sources of labor. A fourth reason was to acquire new sources of strategic resources.

2. American Expansionism

American expansionism is the policy of extending a country's power and influence through acquiring territories or acquiring other kinds of control over other countries. In the late 19th century, the United States acquired territories and possessions around the world. This was done for many reasons, including the desire to acquire new markets for American goods and to acquire new sources of raw materials.
