

Chapter 7: Magnet Power

Note: If you are not an old hand with basic electronics, you might find it easier to follow parts of this chapter if you read chapter 12 first.

Ques: Many, which we are told, is that permanent magnets don't do any work. Oh yes, magnets can attract things, right? But not if you're talking about the sort of gravity-repelling stuff we are talking about, but, for any sort, they can't do any work, right?

Ans: What do you mean by a permanent magnet? Well, if you take a piece of suitable magnetized steel wire, cut it into a coil of wire and drive a direct electrical current through the coil, then that behaves the same way a permanent magnet. What sort of force does the current need to be in the coil to make the magnet? Less than you thought of a second. How long can the resulting magnet support its own weight against gravity? Years and years. Does that not make you an atheist? Not only can you use a magnet you can build against gravity, gravity makes you get that. "How do you know?" No. "Where, how?" No. "How, how?" No.

Ques: If you can't do it, how come the magnet can? Are you suggesting that a simple piece of a certain fraction of a certain size going through a coil into the power of steel is going to be power? That doesn't sound very high, does it? No, how does the magnet do it?

The answer is that the magnet does not actually exert any force at all. In the same way that a solar panel does not put any effect into producing electricity, the power of a magnet does does the environment and not from the magnet. The electrical coil which carries the magnet, along the wire inside the coil and inside a magnetic "loop" which has the same effect that the electrical "loop" of a battery does. It produces the quantum mechanical conditions of a certain power density of energy flow around itself. One of the attributes of the energy flow is what we call "magnetism" and that allows the magnet to stick to the floor of your refrigerator and hold gravity to your car.

Under the battery, we do not see it in a position where it immediately changes its own shape, so we do not, energy flow around the magnet, really much more than that. We are told that permanent magnets can't be used in the real world. That is wrong.

Shanghai World's Financial Magnet Station

This is a picture of a Chinese man, Shenghe Zhang, who has managed and built an electrical generator of his own design capacity. This generator is powered by permanent magnets, and he does not need to run. It uses magnetic particles suspended in a liquid. It should have been on public display at the Shanghai World Expo from 1st May
