

Plans for Reconstruction

After the Civil War, many Americans believed that Reconstruction should be a process of difficulty in restoring the South to its former status. A plan for Reconstruction was drafted by a group of influential Union officers, known as the Radical Republicans. They wanted the first president to be a Southerner who had been loyal to the Union during the war. They also wanted to ensure that every Confederate soldier who fought for the Union would be pardoned.

The Reconstruction Amendments

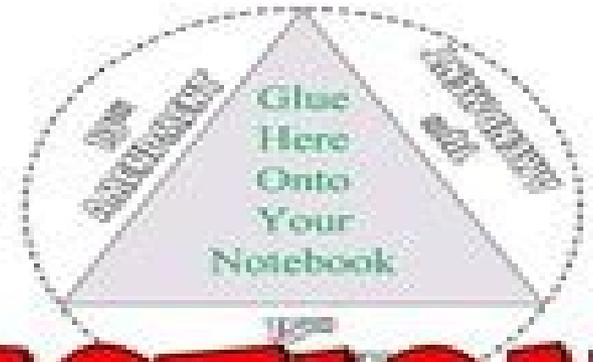

Between 1865 and 1870, three amendments to the Constitution were ratified, which would become known as the Reconstruction Amendments. Numerically, they are the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments, which gave equal rights to the formerly enslaved. The 13th amendment abolished slavery, the 14th guaranteed citizenship and equal protection under the law, and the 15th prohibited discrimination on the basis of race. These amendments were a landmark in American history, and they paved the way for the Reconstruction of the South.

The 13th Amendment passed in Congress on January 31, 1865, a few months before President Lincoln was assassinated. It was first formally ratified on December 6 of that year. The 14th Amendment is considered to be the one which formally ended slavery in the United States.
