Students are used to identifying primary and secondary sources. Primary sources are information in its original form.

They are written directly by the people who lived at a particular moment in time. Primary sources include letters, diaries, journals, newspaper articles, photographs, and other documents.

Secondary sources are written by someone who is not directly involved in the event. They are often used to provide context and analysis of primary sources. Examples include textbooks, encyclopedias, and scholarly articles.

Students are often confused by the terms "primary" and "secondary" and should be able to identify examples of each in their own words.
