CHAPTER 4 Section 1: Population Dynamics (page 40)

Compare methods used about population characteristics.

Methods of population data collection are categorized as:

comprehensive population study

direct dependent variables

study independent

population

Some characteristics that all populations have include (1) population density

(2) population size and (3) dispersion. Population size is the number of individuals in a population, and the range of population size varies enormously. The size ranges from a few individuals to billions. The most common method of measuring population size is direct observation.

Compare methods used about population characteristics.

Compare methods by marking the correct column. (Use the key provided.)

Characteristic	Directly Dependent	Study Independent
(1) Population density		X
(2) Directly dependent variables	X
(3) Population size	X
(4) Indirectly dependent variables		X
(5) Population density	X

Characteristics of four types of dispersion in plants, animals, and humans are as follows:

(1) Population density (population size/population area) is high.

low

(2) Directly dependent variables (population density) are:

low dependent

(3) The independent variables of population density are:

low dependent

(4) Population density (population size/population area) is:
