

OPERATIONAL MANAGEMENT IN MANUFACTURING CASE STUDY

Q. 1. Why is operational management important in CIM?

Answer:

The success of plants in business depends increasingly on increasing output with higher, capital-intensive investments in equipment in CIM. Success in it is critical and important activity for the organization. The efficient operations function for the plant is an essential activity for the organization and that activity for production is usually dependent on the performance. Plant, technical operations and processes are essential to the success of the business in the long run. Hence, technical and operations management is the management of systems for processes that create goods under precise control. Hence, the operations function identifies those capabilities that will form the long-term basis for plant operations. The concept of CIM integrated into operations, that productivity increased with higher automation, plants and other capabilities in the operations function in manufacturing companies under more parameters such as producing goods, the integration and data in control in other related areas, target using lower cost, facilities, more manufacturing cost has been substituted by more productive computer facilities supported by the use of CIM.

1. Efficient use of resources: Operations management ensures that resources are used efficiently and effectively, reducing waste and improving productivity. It involves plant layout and equipment selection, maintenance, and scheduling to optimize resource usage.

2. Quality and Reliability: Operations management ensures consistent production and high-quality products. This involves strict quality control, regular maintenance, and adherence to standards, ensuring that products meet customer expectations.

3. Process Efficiency and Cost Reduction: Operations management is crucial for identifying and implementing process improvements, reducing waste, and lowering costs. This involves analyzing production processes, identifying bottlenecks, and implementing lean manufacturing techniques. This helps in reducing process cost and ensuring that products are manufactured with efficiency.

4. Inventory Management: Operations management helps in maintaining optimal inventory levels, ensuring that products are available when needed without excessive stock. This involves forecasting demand, managing stock levels, and ensuring timely delivery of high-quality products to customers.
