

A photograph of a traditional Japanese interior. The room features a tatami floor with a central light-colored mat. A sliding door (shoji) is partially open, revealing a bright window. To the right, a dark wooden lattice screen (kōshi) is visible. Two small, square, illuminated lanterns (andon) are placed on the floor, one on each side of the central mat. The overall atmosphere is warm and minimalist.

House and Home in Modern Japan Jordan Sand,2005 A house is a site the bounds and focus of a community It is also an artifact a material extension of its occupants lives This book takes the Japanese house in both senses as site and as artifact and explores the spaces commodities and conceptions of community associated with it in the modern era As Japan modernized the principles that had traditionally related house and family began to break down Even where the traditional class markers surrounding the house persisted they became vessels for new meanings as housing was resituated in a new nexus of relations The house as artifact and the artifacts it housed were affected in turn The construction and ornament of houses ceased to be stable indications of their occupants social status the home became a means of personal expression and the act of dwelling was reconceived in terms of consumption Amid the breakdown of inherited meanings and the fluidity of modern society not only did the increased diversity of commodities lead to material elaboration of dwellings but home itself became an object of special attention its importance emphasized in writing invoked in politics and articulated in architectural design The aim of this book is to show the features of this culture of the home as it took shape in Japan

Uncrating the Japanese House: Junzo Yoshimura, Antonin and Noémi Raymond, and George Nakashima Yuka Yokoyama, William Whitaker, 2022-04-05 Midcentury modernism meets Japanese design in three revolutionary American buildings the products of a unique sustained cross cultural collaboration In 1953

Japanese architect Junzo Yoshimura designed a now classic Japanese house and garden that he called Shofuso. It was built in Nagoya, Japan, and shipped to New York in 1954 where it was exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art and then relocated to Philadelphia's Fairmount Park. The curators of MoMA's House in the Garden exhibition highlighted its synthesis of historic Japanese architecture with modern architecture, the clarity of the house's post and beam structure, its flexibility of use, and the close relationship of indoor and outdoor spaces. This extensively illustrated volume centers on Yoshimura's design for Shofuso and two allied sites located in New Hope, Bucks County, Pennsylvania: Raymond Farm (1939–41), a live-work residence built by Antonin and No-mi Raymond within the fabric of an existing 18th-century Quaker farmhouse; and Nakashima Studios, a complex of structures designed by George Nakashima over three decades (1947–77) to serve his furniture-making business and as his family's home. Each site in its own way is the embodiment of the personal relationships and cross-cultural collaborations among this group of architects and designers. The Raymonds, along with Yoshimura, Nakashima, and others, came to understand Japan's changing environment through the act of building through collaboration and travel. Together, they extended these lessons into the furniture and furnishings of modern living in both Japan and the United States. This volume documents an exhibition of objects and ephemera mounted at Shofuso. New York-based architectural photographer Elizabeth Felicella captures each site in a portfolio of newly commissioned images. Essays by Ken Tadashi Oshima and William Whitaker, illustrated with historical photographs, family snapshots, and architectural drawings, further elucidate this important chapter in the history of modern architecture and design.
