Writing Spaces Dana Driscoll, Matthew Vetter, 2020-03-07 Volumes in Writing Spaces Readings on Writing offer multiple perspectives on a wide range of topics about writing. In each chapter authors present their unique views, insights, and strategies for writing by addressing the undergraduate reader directly. Drawing on their own experiences, these teachers as writers invite students to join in the larger conversation about the craft of writing. Consequently, each essay functions as a standalone text that can easily complement other selected readings in first-year writing or writing-intensive courses across the disciplines at any level. Volume 3 continues the tradition of previous volumes with topics such as voice and style in writing, rhetorical appeals, discourse communities, multimodal composing, visual rhetoric, credibility, exigency, working with personal experience in academic writing, globalized writing, and rhetoric, constructing scholarly ethos, imitation, and style, and rhetorical punctuation.

Teaching Mindful Writers Brian Jackson, 2020-05-15 Teaching Mindful Writers introduces new writing teachers to a learning cycle that will help students become self-directed writers through planning, practicing, revising, and reflecting. Focusing on the art and science of instructing self-directed writers through major writing tasks, Brian Jackson helps teachers prepare students to engage purposefully in any writing task by developing the habits of mind and cognitive strategies of the mindful writer. Relying on the most recent research in writing studies and learning theory, Jackson gives new teachers practical advice about setting up writing tasks, using daily writing, leading class discussions, providing feedback, joining teaching communities, and other essential tools that should be in every writing teacher's toolbox. Teaching Mindful Writers is a timely, fresh perspective on teaching students to be self-directed writers.

Ship English Sally Delgado, 2019 This book presents evidence in support of the hypothesis that Ship English of the early Atlantic colonial period was a distinct variety with characteristic features. It is motivated by the recognition that late seventeenth and early eighteenth-century sailors' speech was potentially an influential variety in nascent creoles and English varieties of the Caribbean, yet few academic studies have attempted to define the characteristics of this speech. Therefore, the two principal aims of this study were firstly to outline the socio-demographics of the maritime communities and examine how variant linguistic features may have developed and spread among these communities, and secondly to generate baseline data on the characteristic features of Ship English. The methodology's data collection strategy targeted written representations of sailors' speech prepared or published between the dates 1620 and 1750 and prioritized documents that were composed by working mariners. These written representations were then analyzed following a mixed-methods triangulation design that converged the qualitative and quantitative data to determine plausible interpretations of the most likely spoken forms. Findings substantiate claims that there was a distinct dialect of English that was spoken by sailors during the period of early English colonial expansion. They also suggest that Ship English was a sociolect formed through the mixing, leveling, and simplification processes of koinization. Indicators suggest that this occupation-specific variety stabilized and spread in maritime communities through predominantly oral speech practices and strong affiliations among groups of sailors It was also transferred to port communities and sailors home regions through regular contact between sailors speaking this sociolect and the land based service providers and communities that maintained and supplied the fleets Linguistic data show that morphological characteristics of Ship English are evident at the word level and syntactic characteristics are evident not only in phrase construction but also at the larger clause and sentence levels whilst discourse is marked by characteristic patterns of subordination and culture specific interjection patterns The newly identified characteristics of Ship English detailed here provide baseline data that may now serve as an entry point for scholars to integrate this language variety into the discourse on dialect variation in Early Modern English period and the theories on pidgin and creole genesis as a result of language contact in the early colonial period

Exploring Grammar Through Texts Cornelia Paraskevas,2020-10-19 This textbook provides an innovative introduction to core areas of grammar a systematic guide to the structure of English arranged hierarchically from the word to the sentence to the paragraph level Using a linguistic framework activities and exercises and diverse authentic texts the book connects grammar knowledge to writing development strengthening student understanding of language as a tool for text construction Students of linguistics and English language will develop foundational knowledge about grammar and texts as will writing students Aligning with state curricular standards around the world the book will be particularly useful for students of English Education
